SAI Graduate Student Associate, 2012-2013

Bridget Hanna is a PhD candidate in Social Anthropology at Harvard University. Her dissertation, "Environmental Illness after Bhopal: Health and Culture beyond the Gas Disaster," looks at the corporeal, epistemological, and practical residues that the brief release of toxic gas in 1984 left behind. Her work also deals with themes of biopolitics, subject formation, and expertise. Bridget is the author of several articles and book chapters on global health and environmental issues, along with the coedited The Bhopal Reader (2005), an anthology about the Bhopal gas disaster.
